DR. OUTTEN'S COMMITTEES.

The Medical Society President's Appointments—A Lively Discussion.

Neurology and surgery had a bout at the medical society last night. The bone of contention was a case of traumatic neurosis. Dr. Prewitt submitted a case of a coal miner who had been injured by a stone falling upon his back, causing a fracture of the spine, process of the twelfth dorsal and first lumbar vertebrae. After giving a clinical exposition, Dr. Priest exhibited the case. Dr. Outten opened the discussion with a few remarks on the dividing line between surgery and neurology, stating that the case was not on the borderline between the two sciences. Dr. Priest rose to remark that he thought the case could have been better treated by a surgical operation. Dr. Prewitt created a stir by disputing the correctness of Dr. Priest's diagnosis. He accused the doctor, however, on the ground that he was not a neurologist. He refused to make a diagnosis himself, as he had not the same familiarity with the case as Dr. Prewitt, who had it under his observation for months, surgical cases being remarkably slow whenever they occurred.

was due to extravasation, which had subsequently been absorbed, resulting in the patient's recovery. Dr. Bauley, in replying, characterized Dr. Prewitt's remarks as full of inaccuracies, which he proceeded to ventilate scintillatingly in the appalling nomenclature of neurology. His remarks bristled with ironical aspersions of surgery and no one enjoyed his witty sallies more than Dr. Prewitt, who remarked good naturedly when his assailant sat down that he had entirely evaded the point. Dr. Outten poured oil on the troubled waters by declaring that all the speakers had evaded the point and cutting from their remarks whatever was of value and applying it to the case under discussion. The meeting then closed. During the evening Dr. Outten, the newly elected president, formally took possession of the chair. He announced his standing committee for the year as follows:

Executive Committee—Frank E. Fry, A. H. Meisenbach, E. C. Burnett, Committee on Ethics—Hudson Ford, C. A. Briggs, John Pittman, Committee on Elections—A. C. Robinson, W. S. Moore, W. B. Dorsett, Committee on Publications and Debates—Bransford Lewis, L. R. Helmeyer, E. E. Turner, Library Committee—J. W. Weaver, J. Breman and L. W. Gale.

Vice-President Heine Marks presided during the discussion.

Homeopathic Meeting.
The St. Louis Homeopathic Medical Society met last night at their rooms in the Board of Education Building. President Morgan called the meeting to order, but Dr. L. Martin Kershaw took the chair. Dr. Kershaw presented a paper on "The Nervous Symptoms of La Grippe." After describing the consequent symptoms of prostration, soreness of the muscles, nerve headache due to active congestion of the brain, numbness, etc., the speaker showed meninges, nervous prostration, bronchitis or pneumonia might result. He said that people in the extremes of life subject to serious consequences from the disease and had the poorest chance of recovery. He said that most of the after effects, vertigo, impairment of vision and hearing, cutaneous nervous in character that passed away as health and vigor returned.

The paper was discussed by Drs. T. S. Comstock, J. C. Cummings, L. C. McKinlay, Dr. Overman and F. D. Caulfield.

THE QUAPAWS.

Tribes That Want to Know Where They Are Governmentally At.

PARIS, Tex., Jan. 6.—The bar met yesterday and considered the matter of government in the affiliated tribes in the Quapaw Agency. These tribes have surrendered their tribal governments and now belong to no municipality. The Oklahoma bill omits them from its bounds and they are not a part of the Indian Territory proper. The United States Court now exercises jurisdiction to a degree over that country, but many offenses are not amenable to the Federal Court, but go before the agent and a jury of Indian judges appointed by the United States.

The Muskogee bar directed its secretary, Col. Maxey, to write to Chairman Holman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, suggesting that the affiliated tribes in the Quapaw Agency be given a Government like that of the territory of Alaska, and that a Commissioner be appointed for that country under the laws of Arkansas, with the jurisdiction of an Arkansas Justice of the Peace.

FELLED WITH A CLUB.

Cabmen Lay Out T. J. Hughes, but His Money Was in a Safe.

Thomas Jefferson Hughes, a slight-looking young man, who is employed as a clerk in Julius Salt's cigar store on the northwest corner of Jefferson avenue and Olive street, returned to work last evening after an enforced absence of three days. During this time he was confined to his bed as a result of injuries he received at the hands of a cabman early Wednesday morning. Tuesday night he put $50 in his pocket, and after closing up started for the Morgan Club, where he deposited his money. From there he got a cab and began to have a good time on the remaining $5, and whatever other money he happened to have about him. In the early hours of the morning he arrived at Balducci's saloon on the southeast corner of Twentieth and Chestnut streets, and was followed by a few cabmen, who had seen him flash a roll of bills up at the Morgan Club earlier in the night. They began to quarrel with Hughes, but after a time desisted and went out the front door. He followed when he had finished imbibing, and as he was going through the front door one of the cabmen, who had stepped in through a Twentieth-street door, ran up behind him and dealt him a terrific blow with a club over the right ear. He fell to the ground like a log and the cabmen went through him. Hughes says they didn't get much and that when he regained consciousness he walked back to the Morgan Club and washed up, and that they sent him home from there in a carriage.

OBITUARY.

James Buchanan

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 6.—James Buchanan, lawyer, politician and inventor, died this morning, aged 57 years. He was known as "Plan" Buchanan, because of his peculiar monetary theories and was the most conspicuous Eastern member of the Greenback party. He was an intimate friend of the late Sen. P. Butler. Mr. Buchanan was famous for his remarkable memory, having on one occasion quoted without reference citations in the supreme court. He received yearly an immense royalty on his many patents and recently sold an invention for $50,000.

Hon. John J. Nequa.

NEVADA, Mo., Jan. 6.—Hon. John J. Nequa, Representative from Vernon county, died at his home at Deerfield, ten miles from here, this morning at 3:30 o'clock. He was 47 years old. Death resulted from diabetes. He was elected Representative in 1892 and was the author of the bill requiring the bond and investment companies of this state to make a deposit of $50,000 with the State Treasurer.

Death of Capt. Fagan.

"The Beautiful Light."

I've traveled many a weary league,
Through many a dreary, darksome vale;
Across the waves of a misty sea,
O'er wondrous, weird, and shadowy gale.

I've sought for beauty in the North,
And sought for beauty in the South;
But there's nothing farther from me
Than the light that my dear love's eyes—
The beautiful light,
That gleams from my dear love's eyes—
The light in my dear love's eyes.

The burdens of life press hard and fast,
The way grows dark and drear,
My pathway darks, my life grows dim,
My heart is filled with fear—
But the light that gleams from my eyes
All clear my pathway leads,
For a loved one's smile strengthens me,
In the light of my dear love's eyes—
The beautiful light,
That gleams from my dear love's eyes—
The light in my dear love's eyes.

This light gleams ever before mine eyes,
A beacon to steer and lead,
To warn, to cheer, to give me on
In the world of woe and dread,
And so when life at last is o'er,
And my soul's journey ends,
May I ray stream down to greet me then
From the light that my dear love's eyes—
The beautiful light,
That gleams from my dear love's eyes—
The light in my dear love's eyes.

Do I love her? I am a happy slave—
Do I love her? I am a happy slave—
Do I love her? I am a happy slave—

But I'm afraid secret love is not more strong,
 Than that which is so open, and so plain;
 But memory swiftly, like a cunning knave,
 Hath stol'n his secrets from me, and will prove
 And closely hiding smiles and tricks and tearful eyes
 "You love me still! You love me still all along!"
 A dash of pride, and I'll mount my cheek like the walls
 She lightly mocked at, and my heart will be
 And she could bring me weeping at her feet.
 Love, and find no duty half so sweet.
 "My love, my heart! Think you do she love me,
 And me, and me, and me, and me, and me,

 I dare not hope she thinks of me—and yet
 For suddenness I had a little hope,
 "Against the world, no man, and nobody said,
 "Life can never be higher, he, unless—"
 "Against the world, no man, and nobody said,
 "Two trembling lids down dropt, then hid her eyes,

At the Wednesday evening prayer meeting the good old parson gave out his text for the following sabbath and the male members of the rising generation determined to play a part in the service. All the while the old did was to paste together a row of the pages of the psalm book. When the service came he good man arose and in a voice that inspired confidence he read: "I will praise thee, O Lord, unto himself a wife and she was—" here he sang a cabby song and "we are hundred and twenty and without—" He paused, then read it again and the congregation sang the song. The parson smiled and said: "I never saw this before, but it's all right. We'll have to be a little bit more careful. We are made up of simple and wondrous things."

On one of these oc-

any, a passenger, desiring to get out of the car, stepped out of the door and gave the bull-strip a vigorous rap, for it was customary in those days for the passengers to get out of the car and stand on the sidewalk for a short space for the right side of the road and twice for the left. The Rev. Mr. Gallagher, who was in the car, looked on for an illustration that might "point a moral or two," and he saw the bull-strip, and jumping to his feet he exclaimed: "Brethren, that reminds me—one pull to the right and two to the left." The driver, for every pull that he gets to the left he gets two to the left." F. H. C.

MEN'S HATS.

The Latest Correct Styles in Masculine Headwear.

Written for the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH.

A hat for men is a mighty tricky article for a maker to flumm with. It must be worn on the head, and it must be made to follow the lines of the human face and contour and it must be different from anything that has been seen for at least four seasons previous. How can a maker meet these requirements? The answer is simple. It would be out of the question altogether were it not for the little trick known as "combination." This consists in robbing a little from this style and a little from that style and combining them into a new style until a composite hat stalks forth as a new revelation.

A few years ago it was the proper career to wear a hat several sizes too small for your head and a necktie or cravat that was not a good-sized apple. This was an English conceit, which took the American people by surprise.

After awhile a reaction set in and the reign of the big hat and the wide necktie was proclaimed. Men heroically striving to keep his head from being frost bitten in a little hat, it was said, and men who were not content with a small head staggering under the burden of a hat a large size.

The hat of fashion to-day is neither too large nor too small. It is a happy medium. Different sizes of crowns and brims are made and the maker has a choice of styles, but anything bordering on extremes is strenuously avoided. The silk topies, which were worn for a season, have changed in shape, but in size they have not. The derby, which has held its own for a generation, is as popular as ever.

It has not by any means usurped the functions of the silk hat, but it has taken its place as a popular topper for formal occasions. The man who wears a silk hat during the day would be informed that he is doing the very thing which the swells insist he shall not do.

There is no doubt that on all formal occasions, excepting possibly those which take place in the country, the silk hat is the dominant and not universally followed even by members of the set.

At the recent meeting of the Union League Club in proud of the fact that he has never had a hat made for him by a hatter.

A PETRIFFED CAT.

Four Years Ago How Was Pet
Brooklyn Army.

From New York Special.

They are singing "The Cat Came Back!" in the Forty-seventh Regiment Armory, Mare avenue and Heyward street, Brooklyn. The cat is a pet of the soldiers. "Now the cat is nothing but stone, and for four years past the rats and mice infesting the rifle range in the basement have looked upon him with astonishment. The animal is now exulted in one of the company's rooms."

The cat is a black and white one, with a colored marker in the rifle range. The marker is a small, round, white object, and it is a pet to another. Once after chasing the cat he cornered it, he thought, in the rifle range. He chased after it, but it escaped from him down the steps leading to the rifle range. He chased after it, but it disappeared, and its whereabouts remained a mystery until a few days ago.

"Two weeks ago," says the necessary to make some change at the rear of the rifle range, he was in the rifle range. He was shooting and between it and the wall beyond is a space of several inches. There it was, he saw it. He was in the rifle range yesterday afternoon, while laborers were at work on the rifle range. He was in the rifle range, in a crouching position in the space between the rifle shooting of the rifle range and the wall.

When it paid no attention to his calls he was a piece of a cat. He was a piece of a cat to buy it. It was then dug out and found to be thoroughly petrified.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

EVENING WRAP BY REDFERN.

[Designed and Drawn Especially for the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH.]

This mantle to be worn in the evening was designed by Redfern. It is of cream-colored moire and violet velvet. The full short cape is of velvet, the short shoulder cape and long front pieces of the moire trimmed with bands of mink. The high collar is also of mink. Three yards each of velvet and silk will make the wrap.

FOR THE TEA TABLE.

Odd Things for the Girl Who Presides at the Copper Kettle.

It was really a remarkable tea jacket, though it was composed mainly of odds and ends. The small, sleeveless zouave jacket was of black velvet, carefully cut from the least worn places in her mother's old black velvet gown. The enormous sleeves of golden-towered silk were made of material, originally intended for sofa cushions, and purchased at the bargain counter for that purpose. The soft golden-colored vest was of crepe de Chine, from a ball gown whose days were over. But the effect was strikingly harmonious and French.

A tea gown which the same inventive genius designed was not quite so successful, though it was entirely new. It was made of changeable brown silk, that shaded from chestnut to gold. It was long, loose and flimsy, and trimmed with a jabot of lace from the neck to the hem.

HER SIMPLE GOWN.

It was a Refreshing Change for Eyes Accustomed to Many Frills and Bows.

The children's gowns are so elaborate this year that it is refreshing to see a maiden simply attired.

But among the many overdressed little girls one occasionally sees a bright-faced child in a gown which is quite up to date in design and yet delightfully simple.

Port and Beauty Combined.

es is of white crepe de chine and worn with a guimpe of ice insertion. The undergarment is made full and plain at the bottom. The little old at the front and has big shoulders. The guimpe and the small sleeves, edged with lace, peep out from a big puff. There is not a touch of the little gown has the comfort and lightness.

OVER THE WASHTUB.

Hints Which the Landlady May Follow With Good Results.

A veteran and most successful washerwoman says that the secret of well laundered clothes consists of three things—"sorting, soaking and sunning." There are, of course, other processes, but these are the most important features connected with laundry work.

On the day before the washing the clothes should be sorted into several piles, body linen, household linen, fine things, coarse ones and flannels. Each article should be moistened, rubbed with soap and put to soak in warm water. The next day the washing should be done, using good yellow soap, and a little soda to soften the water. Two washings through warm water and a thorough wringing should precede the boiling.

From the boiler the clothes should be dropped into a tub of clear, cold water and wrung out of that into the blue water. Whether the clothes are wrung out by hand or by machine, two people are required to wring them. They should be hung on the lines in the sunshine, and the light will complete the whitening begun by soap and water.

Flannels should not be soaked. They should not have soap rubbed on them, but should be shaken into a lather. They should be washed in tepid instead of very hot or cold water. They must not be blued, but alone should be dried indoors, near the fire, and when drying by sun would be a lengthy process.

LACE JACKETS, YOKES AND BIBS.

Various Are the Means by Which My Lady Freshens Her Gown.

It matters little the style or fabric of the gown. In order to have it completely up to date, a jabot of rare lace, a bit of gayly tinted chiffon or a shower of soft mull must adorn the neck of the bodice. There are lace yokes and bibs, ribbon collarettes and a bewildering array of tiny jabots, all of which are meeting with an enthusiastic welcome.

One of the new adjustable yokes is made of bands of point de gaze insertion alternating with stripes of emmentine velvet. The yoke is edged back and front with a deep ruffle of lace, veiling in emmentine silk. High gaudy cuffs of the silk are covered with lace insertion and edged with a lace ruffle. The cuffs are sold with the yoke.

Another new idea is a series of fine black net ruffles which outline the yoke, float over the shoulders and then wander down the front of the bodice. Each ruffle is bordered with three rows of silk, pale violet, green and pink.

A twisted coil of velvet defining the yoke and supporting two fluffy epaulets of crepe de chine is another new idea in the way of dressing up a plain or somber bodice. These dainty affairs for the neck will transform a gown with very little expense.

Recollected Oysters.

Butter a deep baking dish and put in a layer of cracker crumbs on the bottom. Wet these with cream, put in spoonful of spoonful. Next have a layer of fine, large oysters. Season with salt and pepper, and stew with bits of sweet, fresh butter. Pour in a little of the oyster juice. Bake in a hot oven. The oysters are moist, and so on until the dish is full, the top layer to be cracker crumbs. Beat up an egg in a cup of cream or rich milk and turn it over all. Set in the oven, invert a pint, invert a pint, and bake until the juice bubbles up on the top. Remove the cover, and when the crumbs are golden brown, take the dish from the oven and serve as baked.

A Novel Paper Rack.

Paper racks are so essentially serviceable that they invariably make excellent gifts. The one shown in the drawing is quite new and is quite sufficiently capacious to fill all needs.

To make it you will require a banner-rod, some silk or gold cord, two tassels and two yards of either handsome bro-

The Rack Complete.

ceded ribbon or four-inch strips embroidered by yourself. Cut the material into two lengths, each of one yard, and line them both, first with linen canvas, then with silk. Fold both strips so that the ends meet, then stitch firmly together by the center, and exactly to fit the rod, slip the latter in its place with one hand, a few inches from each end, and wind for its entire length with cord of some corresponding color. Attach a loop of the cord, by which the rack is put in the cupboard upon the wall, and finish with the tassels, which should hang one at either end.

A Cold Room for Dwellings.

The "cold room" is not an uncommon feature of many expensive and convenient houses. It is in reality a refrigerator of some improved make, as large as a pantry, provided with shelves from floor to ceiling on three sides. On the fourth are hooks where meats may be hung. The room is perfectly ventilated and the ice is put in from the outside, so that it is unnecessary for the ice man to enter the house.

JACKETS FOR MY LADY.

"Dreams" in Astrakhan and Ermine Appear on Fifth Avenue.

The latest fur coat to flaunt itself is French enough to delight the heart of the American-born maiden. It is a short, tight-fitting garment of black astrakhan, ending below the waistline in two absurdly flaring ruffles, both lined with pale green moire silk.

In place of a collar a box of astrakhan is placed about the neck, with a head and tail fastened together in front.

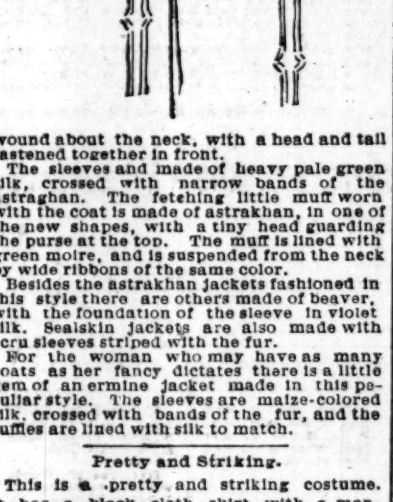

The sleeves are made of heavy pale green silk, crossed with narrow bands of the astrakhan. The fastenings are little buff worst with the coat is made of astrakhan, in one of the new shapes, with a tiny head guarding the purse at the top. The muff is lined with green moire, and is suspended from the neck by wide ribbons of the same color.

Besides the astrakhan jackets fashioned in this style there are others made of beaver, with the foundation of the sleeve in violet silk. Sashkin jackets are also made with extra sleeves striped with the fur.

For the woman who may have as many coats as her fancy dictates there is a little sem of an ermine jacket made in this peculiar style. The sleeves are maize-colored silk crossed with bands of the fur, and the ruffles are lined with silk to match.

Pretty and Striking.

This is a pretty and striking costume. It has a black cloth skirt with a monster piping of black satin round the hem, black cloth sleeves, and full basque silver thread; a soft, cream-colored lace forms the epaulets, and the deep flounce of the same round the plain skirt is headed with a silver cord.

Washing the Face.

Some people argue that the face should never be washed with soap, but surely a surface so exposed to all the small particles flying about in the dust-laden air should be given as thorough cleansing as the body, which is sheltered by clothing from contact with deleterious substances.

It is necessary to choose a good soap, one that will not injure the skin, and, as a rule, a dainty woman always enjoys a faint fragrance, there can be no harm in using a delicately scented soap. Night is the best time to restore the complexion and by morning only the good effects of the vigorous treatment are visible. Benzoin water is an excellent tonic for night service, but it must be used carefully, as its qualities form a new epidemic, and if the old skin is in a condition to be cast off, little flaky scales will be shed in consequence.

House Gown.

Pale blue India silk, trimmed with white lace; the neck is V-shaped and the sleeves are full. Ten yards of material.

Pretty and Inexpensive.

An inexpensive and pretty fancy slip to cover a soft pillow first was the saten in any shade, and over this put a slip of white lace. Oriental in a fine-sprigged pattern is the prettiest. Around the slip is a gathered ruffle of the edge of the lace 4 inches wide, which matches the pillow cover in pattern. This slip can be arranged to remove when soiled, and be carefully washed to look like new.

The Birthday Calendar.

The Friendship calendar, where one's friends write upon 365 slips of paper, may not be always feasible, as it is a lamentable fact that not all of us have that many intimates to call upon. In such a case, here is a substitute invented by an ingenious young woman who wanted to present her sister with a birthday gift, and, like many of us, more love than gold at her command. She wrote and spoke to fifty-two of her friends, and each one in turn received a week's calendar at the top and had been punched for the insertion of a ribbon sewed together to make an endless chain upon which to turn the cards back. These were all intertwined with some complimentary wish for the days of the coming year. An

SOME KITCHEN ECONOMIES.

The Stock Pot and Dripping Pan Should Lessen Expenses.

The truly economic housewife is not the one who "goes without" things, but she who makes do out of odds and ends. The woman who does not leave soup out of her everyday dinners, but who makes soup of scraps of bone, meat, fish and vegetables, is the thrifty one, and she who has learned not to get along without fried dishes in place of cooked ones is economical.

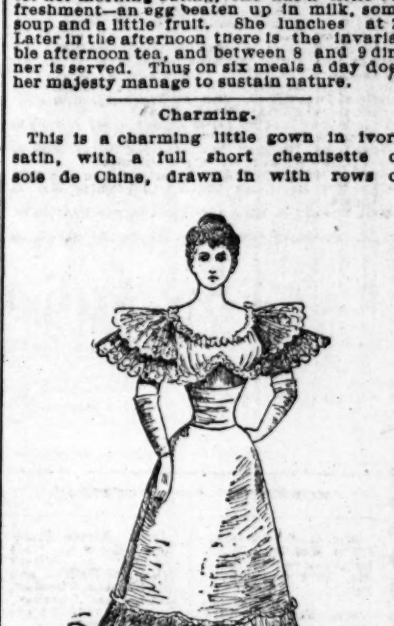

Drippings from beef and pieces of fat trimmed from various sorts of meat may be clarified and saved to be used instead of lard and butter in frying. Pure beef drippings have a flavor closely resembling butter, and any sort of home prepared frying fat is greatly to be preferred to lard.

Six Meals a Day.

Queen Victoria has evidently pondered well on the saying that a man must eat to live. At halmoral, where she lives in the simplest possible way, she begins her day at 8 o'clock with tea, chocolate or coffee and dry toast. At 9:30 she has breakfast, a small trout freshly caught from the river, being an invariable dish. At 11:30, after her morning outing, she has a little refreshment—an egg beaten up in milk, some soup and a little fruit. She lunches at 2. Later in the afternoon there is the favorable afternoon tea, and between 8 and 9 dinner is served. Thus on six meals a day does her majesty manage to sustain nature.

Charming.

This is a charming little gown in ivory satin, with a full, short chemisette of soie de chine, drawn in with rows of gainsure, interwoven with gold thread, and over the puffed sleeves fall shaped epaulets.

Jokes on Us.

The caller: "Dear Mrs. Murrice, I was so astonished to find that your new parlor maid was my old Christine, whom I dismissed for prying into my affairs! How do you like her?"

Bobby Murrice (before his mother has a chance to speak): "Huh! That's just the reason ma likes her, ain't it, ma? She knows such a jolly lot about you."

"Why aren't Esther and that young Pennyweight seen together any more? He used to be her shadow."

"Yes, that was it. She said he cast too much gloom into her path."

Priscilla: "Did you know Harry de Ruyter had written a poem to Mary Linsey? I don't see anything poetic about her, do you?"

Jenny: "No, but he told me he did it because more things rhyme with Mary than with either Priscilla or Jenny. He said he had 'airy' and 'fairy' in her case and he couldn't think of anything but 'trill' and 'miller' for you and 'penny' for me, so you see how it was."

Veal.

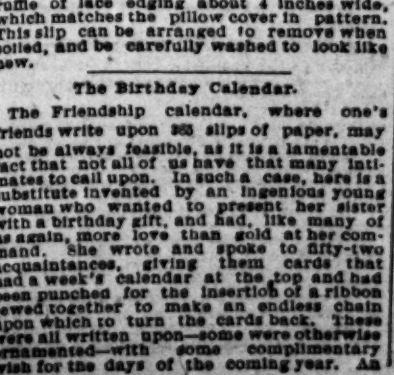

Veal, to be just right, should be of pinkish white flesh, with clear white fat. If there are no receptacles for the dressing, which is the life of roast veal, the skin may be successfully separated from the flesh here and there, making pockets for the dressing, but if you use the only proper pieces for roasting, there will be no trouble about finding places.

Gingerbread.

Two cupsful of flour, one cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of sour milk, one teaspoonful of ginger (yellow), one fourth teaspoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of soda.

FASHIONS FROM PARIS.

[Designed and Drawn Especially for the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH.]

A Gown by Worth.

To-day's costume is a street gown designed by M. Worth. The material is lady's cloth, trimmed with rich black lace. The skirt is full and plain, a deep flounce of the lace trimming the bottom. The old sleeves and bodice will command themselves to the woman in search of something new.

FOR THE SMALL GIRL.

Is It May She Be a Picture on Christmas Day?

There are other persons besides the "grown-up" folk who have dinner dress. This gown is of pale pink crepe, with full plain undergarment. White crepe de chit is used for the waist, which is full on yoke of pink silk and edged by perpendicular.

lar bands of pink satin ribbon, each one headed with a gay little rosette. Around the waist is a broad pink satin belt, which ties in a pert bow with long ends in front. The sleeve to this dainty little gown consists of a full puff of pink crepe, half smothered by a frilled radiance of white crepe de chine. Below the puff peeps out a ruffle of white crepe with another ruffle of pink crepe as a sort of foundation.

A Towel Rack.

A very pretty one can be made of rings of polished oak, which can be purchased in any furniture store. Let the rings be six inches in diameter and hang them by three-inch satin ribbon tied in a large bow to hide the hook to which they are fastened.

Evening Dress.

French taffeta; the skirt is trimmed with rouleaux of crepe; the bodice has a lace basque and sleeves, and is crepe trimmed. Nineteen yards of material.
